As Piggy, Chinook and Coho scurried along the path, they saw a beautiful pond off to the side.

"_____ we stop and get a drink of water?" whined Coho.

"Only if we make it a quick stop," replied Piggy. "_____ you in a hurry to get home?"

"Yes," wheeked Chinook. "I _____ realized how long we have been gone."

The three friends gathered around the pond for a well deserved drink. All at once an orange and white fish named Oki appeared and said, "_____ it more polite to ask before you take some of my water?"

"We are all very sorry, we just _____ thinking," answered the three Guinea Pigs. "Would you mind if we had a few sips?"

"Well, it _____ been a very warm spring so far and the water lilies still have not bloomed. I'll trade you some water for one of your daisies," suggested Oki.

Coho handed one of her six remaining daisies to Oki. The three friends refreshed themselves by the pond and went on their way.
